New Food Service Director Steps Up at Norfolk Public Schools

NORFOLK, NE — Norfolk Public School District is pleased to announce that TJ Feyerherm has joined the district's lunch program team as the new Director of Food Service.

Feyerherm comes to NPS from Northeast Community College, where he was the Director of Dining Services for the past 3 years. In that role, he developed strong leadership and management skills that will make him successful in heading up meal service for the students at NPS. He has nearly 20 years of experience in menu planning, catering and event management in both restaurant and education settings.

TJ grew up in Randolph, NE. He trained for his chef titles under Master Chef Dominico Beradicurti. He has worked as a Sous Chef, then Chef de Cuisine at J's Steakhouse in Norfolk and was the Executive Chef for Wayne State.

TJ also has two children that he is Executive Chef for and enjoys being active with all their activities.

"We are looking forward to the experience and professional background Thomas brings to the table. His passion, culinary knowledge and drive make him an excellent fit for this role, and we couldn't be more pleased to have him join the Lunchtime/Norfolk team. His leadership qualities and experience are top notch and will provide opportunities for the team to continue to grow in their positions as well. The food service program and partnership we have with NPS has been a great success for the students and families in the community. We are looking forward to Thomas continuing the traditions and adding his own spice and flavor to the program." Said Tony Graham, Area Director for Lunchtime Solutions.

Feyerherm, who hails from Randolph, NE, holds an Associates of Applied Science in Business Management from Northeast Community College.
